VALENCE ROMANS

DESTINATION DOUCE DRÔME

SEASON 2025

Editorial

Take the time to explore. To experience. To live every moment. Welcome to Valence Romans.

In the heart of Drôme between the Vercors mountains and the bucolic hills of Ardèche, this is where to come to slow down and take in every moment. The climate here is mild and unusually sunny, the perfect backdrop for the French way of life, played out over the seasons.

Just 35 minutes from Lyon and an hour by TGV from Marseille, this vibrant and accessible corner of Drôme opens the door to a friendly, personal holiday experience where you drink in the local atmosphere.

In the 54 villages and towns that make up Valence Romans, there's a delightful discovery on every corner: a shady square, a local market, a buzzing café terrace and local heritage and traditions communicated with passion.

Here, there's history in every pretty village, delicious meal and local encounter.

Walks and rambles, bike rides, riverside picnics, fine dining in our Michelin-starred restaurants and fresh farm produce from the locals, fun family festivals and foot-tapping concerts...

What's not to like? Every moment is an opportunity to soak up the wonderful pace of life here.

2025 Tour de France

On 23 July 2025 Valence will be the finish town of the Tour de France stage starting at Bollène. After passing through nearby Chabeuil, Le Tour will enter Valence along the Avenue de Chabeuil to the finish on Boulevard Roosevelt.

Return of the Foire du Dauphiné

After its cancellation in 2024, the Foire du Dauphiné trade fair will return to Romans from 27 September to 6 October 2025. The new venue for the fair is on the Les Glycines site, where visitors will have 36,000 m² of exhibition space to browse.

Châteauneuf-sur-Isère Interpretation Centre

This Interpretation Centre (opened in June 2025) comprises a visitor centre, exhibition space and 'guinguette' dance café. The centre tells the story of the old stone quarries and cave houses at Châteauneuf-sur-Isère. There is also a botanical garden growing medicinal plants used in times past to treat eye diseases.

Heritage centre – Maison du Mouton

Following the complete restoration of the building, the new Maison du Mouton cultural centre in the town centre reopened in early 2025. The new heritage centre provides a fascinating insight into Romans' history.

Greening the boulevards

Valence and Romans are getting a green makeover for the summer! With summer temperatures on the rise, the two towns have opted to incorporate new green spaces into the wide boulevards, providing welcome cool shade for pedestrians and cyclists. The work in Romans (Place Jean Jaurès) is due to be completed by July/August 2025. In Valence, visitors and locals can already enjoy the cool shade under the trees along Boulevard Bancel.

New monumental sculpture in Valence

Hubert III, a new 3m-high bronze sculpture by the world-famous artist Bruno Catalano, is part of his 'Voyageurs' series. The sculpture, based on a model created locally in Drôme by the Barthélémy Art Foundry, has been erected on Place de la Liberté, in front of Valence Mairie.

Vercors Regional Nature Park now bigger

In January 2025, 11 additional communes in the Valence Romans Agglo area were incorporated into the Vercors Regional Nature Park in an expansion of this protected nature zone in the foothills of the Vercors.

New visitor attraction: La Ferme Intégrale

Opened in 2020 in La Baume d'Hostun, La Ferme Intégrale uses aquaponics (where fish and aquatic plants are farmed together in a complementary ecosystem in which the waste produced by one becomes food for the other) to reduce its environmental impact at every stage of production. The farm, which produces both vegetables and fish (zander), opened to the public in May, running guided tours to show visitors how their special process work.

Chabeuil Tourist Office

Chabeuil Tourist Office is moving! The new, bigger premises with better facilities will be opening to the public in spring 2025.

The history of Valence

Set in the sweeping Rhône Valley and enjoying a Mediterranean climate, Valence is often described as the 'Gateway to the South of France'.

Between the Vercors plateau and the hills of Provence, its geographical location attracts tourists from far and wide. Named by the Romans as Valentia (the Vigorous), the city grew up on the fertile ground of three alluvial terraces overlooking the River Rhône, because it was the Romans who put Valence on the map.

The great battle of 121 BCE between the Roman legions and a coalition of Gaulish tribes paved the way for the conquest of Gaul. Valentia became a Roman outpost, a strategic stronghold at the crossroads of several major communication routes.

Later, the lower town grew up around the river port and arsenal, while the medieval city remained protected inside its late-Roman-Empire walls, strengthened in 1570 under Charles IX. Valence may have taken refuge within its walls, but the city maintained its ties with the Rhône, a major trade route and until the 15th century the border between the kingdom of France and the Holy Roman Empire. In the 16th century, Valence's military importance grew and it became a citadel.

The strong walls protected the elegant mansions and grand town houses that sprang up at that time. The ornately decorated Maison des Têtes is one of the finest examples of the impressive architecture that blossomed then. The 17th century saw a major turning point in the city's history, when several religious orders became established there. The city evolved into a centre of religious, administrative and judicial influence, with trade taking a back seat. The historical centre of Valence has retained its medieval feel and narrow back streets. It was not until the 19th century that the city outgrew its walls, which were replaced by broad urban boulevards from 1860 onwards. Many remains of the medieval period, the Renaissance and 17th, 18th and 19th centuries are still very much in evidence in the city centre.

Today, Valence's economy is driven essentially by the food production, metallurgy, mechanical engineering and electronics industries.

The history of Romans

Romans-sur-Isère began with an abbey founded by Barnard, Archbishop of Vienne, in 837. The abbey came under the protection of the pope in Rome, giving the town its name which means 'the town that grew up around'.

The first bridge over the River Isère was built in 1049 to facilitate trade, chiefly between Romans and Bourg-de-Péage, giving rise to the latter's name of 'toll town', after the significant revenue raised from people paying to use the bridge.

Rumans d'Isera, as it was known, became an important market town thanks to its position on the River Isère, where it developed a flourishing textiles industry renowned far and wide for nearly seven centuries. In the Middle Ages the first tawers and tanners settled in the town's Presle district, making good use of the excellent riverside location there.

During the Hundred Years' War, a second wall was built around the town, taking in the suburbs which had grown up in the Presle, Pavigne and Saint-Nicolas districts. This wall was demolished in around 1830, but some parts of it are still visible today: a tower in rue des Remparts Saint-Nicolas and sections of wall on Quai Sainte-Claire and in the Cemetery of Saint-Romain.

In the early 15th century textiles from Romans were exported as far away as the Middle East and all over the town rich merchants built opulent residences in the Flamboyant Gothic style. In 1516 a rich and pious Romans merchant, Romanet Boffin, built a Way of the Cross in the town leading up to the Récollets Calvary. This place of pilgrimage was conceived as an alternative to the pilgrimage to Jerusalem in the Holy Land, which was very costly and had become perilous since the Turkish conquest. The Romans pilgrimage quickly became a huge success. The stations of the Way of the Cross and Calvary have seen many ups and down through the ages, but they remain a part of the town's living heritage today. Every year on Good Friday, hundreds of believers follow the 'Grand Voyage' up to the Calvary.

After 1850 the development of the shoemaking industry in Romans brought about a profound change in the town's economy and society. Having reached the luxury end of the market between the two world wars, in the late 20th century the industry declined, with the last famous names shutting up shop (Stéphane Kelian in 2005 and Charles Jourdan in 2008). However, a footwear industry of sorts has continued in Romans-sur-Isère. In 2019 a new Cité de la Chaussure was opened to provide a home for the main players in today's shoemaking industry.

Local Flavours

HAVE A TASTE OF OUR DELICACIES

Here, every mouthful gives you an genuine taste of the region. Known for its fine organic produce and culinary expertise, Drôme is best explored through the people who live here: on the farm, at a farmers' market or in one of our gourmet restaurants.

Here, every taste tells a story and every encounter is an authentic experience. Come and find out for yourself.

Local produce and fine food

Drôme, France's leading organic department

Since the 1970s, the Drôme has been growing its organic sector: agriculture, agri-food, cosmetics, wellness... Ranked 1st organic department in France in number of farms for several decades, the Drôme has always been a pioneer in organic farming.

The Drôme is now known for its excellence in agriculture, particularly in arboriculture and viticulture. With its 1728 farms engaged in organic farming in 2021, the Drôme is the 2nd organic department of France. It holds 60,438 ha in organic areas, which places it 3rd after the Gers and the Loire-Atlantique. After several decades of rule, the Drôme is still a major player in the bio... Since 2007, the Drôme department has been hosting the Tech n bio show every two years. Organized by the chambers of agriculture and some sixty partners, the professionals share the most innovative techniques for a sustainable farming performance.

La Vallée de la Gastronomie - France ®

La Vallée de la Gastronomie is a single concept that covers several regions, stretching from Burgundy and Franche-Comté to Auvergne Rhône-Alpes, Provence and the department of Gard in Occitanie. These regions have brought together their gastronomic offerings to delight the palate and provide unforgettable gourmet experiences in warm, welcoming surroundings.

The Vallée de la Gastronomie brand is our way of introducing chefs, restaurateurs, producers, artisans and wineries to our visitors, helping them to explore the gastronomy and way of life of our unique destination.

Vineyards

Running through the heart of the Rhône Valley, the Valence Romans Sud Rhône-Alpes region is a favourite with wine buffs.

Vineyards producing some of France's most prestigious appellations d'origine cover the hillsides here: Southern Côtes du Rhône, Saint Joseph, Crozes-Hermitage, Saint-Péray, Cornas and Hermitage are made according to age-old tradition, giving our region a much-deserved reputation for its wines.

Local markets

Whether you're visiting a large city-centre market, a village market, a local food or producers' market or any of the region's host of other markets to buy clothes, books, curios or flowers, it's always a lovely experience filling your basket with local purchases and soaking up the market atmosphere with your family or friends.

Our markets often occupy quaint little squares where you can browse the many stalls, share a smile and try out your French with a stallholder, become a part of local life, buy organic products direct from surrounding farms and stock up on regional and local specialties.

The fruits of Drôme

Drôme is full of sunny fruits! As soon as spring arrives beautiful flowers are observed on the Drômois fruit trees and from the month of May cherries arrive then apricots and peaches during July.

Producers like Le Clos Fougères offer on-the-farm experiences, including educational tours, hands-on activities, pick-your-own opportunities, and of course, a farm shop where you can buy their products at producer prices.

Walnuts

Originally from the East, walnuts were introduced to Europe by the Romans. Its nutritional virtues were already peddled by ancient medicine.

In 1938 the walnut was the first fruit in the world to receive a Controlled Designation of Origin (AOC)

In the 11th century, nuts supplied the family oil needed for food and lighting. It was also used for the composition of walnut wines, the making of cakes, bread, the preparation of medicines or even the elaboration of dyes. The walnut fits with many dishes such as cheese, honey or chocolate. It can be enjoyed at any time of the day: as an aperitif, in salad, crushed in certain dishes or at the end of meals accompanied by cheese, honey or bread.

Truffles

France's famous truffle region of Drôme des Collines covers the territory of 33 towns and villages. It accounts for 15% of south-east France's total truffle production, which lays claim to 75% of the whole country's production! Known locally as le diamant noir ('black diamond'), the truffle found in Drôme, Tuber melanosporum, has an exceptionally powerful earthy flavour.

As one of the region's flagship gastronomic products, it is much in demand from chefs around the region. A number of truffle farms continue the tradition of truffle growing and collecting, including La Baume Saint-Antoine farm at Romans-sur-Isère.

Interesting fact: cavage, the practice of using a specially trained animal (usually a dog) to sniff out black truffles (which grow underground), takes place in winter.

The culinary specialities

Raviole

This speciality consisting of pasta squares stuffed with cheese and parsley is a cousin of Italian ravioli and Russian pelmeni; indeed it would seem that they share similar origins. The story goes that Italian charcoal burners and woodcutters who came to work in the Royans-Vercors area simply came up with a variation on their native ravioli, replacing the meat inside (a rare treat in France at the time!) with goat's cheese.

Once regarded as a poor man's version of ravioli, it soon became a popular treat on public holidays. In the early 20th century, professional raviole cooks, known as ravioleuses, popularised the dish, which by then was regarded as a proper dish in its own right. Mère Maury (Marie-Louise Gélibert) was one of the first generation of ravioleuses, serving up the speciality in her famous café-restaurant.

Caillette

Delicious eaten hot or cold, caillette is a small and tasty pressed-meat dish of pork and herbs. Depending on the recipe, it can also contain spinach, chard, and/or cabbage.

Today the town of Chabeuil near Valence continues the caillette tradition by cooking up this tasty dish. The origins of this regional specialty, which has many variations, are believed to date back to the Middle Ages. It was likely created in the countryside, where pork was a staple of the local diet. Making caillette allowed people to use leftover meat after butchering the pig.

The Pogne

Flavoured with orange blossom, pogne is a traditional kind of brioche that hails from the Romans-sur-Isère region. Known to have been around since the Middle Ages, traditionally it was eaten at the end of Lent, when good Christians were forbidden from eating eggs. Pogne contains lots of egg, celebrating the fact that over the Easter feast days eggs were back on the menu!

Nowadays this speciality brioche is available all year round, having lost its original religious significance over time.

The Suisse

This 200-year-old Valence favourite is effectively a 'shortbread man' flavoured with confit orange peel and orange blossom.

Its unusual shape is said to have been inspired by the death of Pope Pius VI in 1799. It is said that a Valence baker came up with the biscuit in tribute to the soldiers of the Vatican's Swiss Guard, who guarded the pope's remains. Its fun shape appeals to children, but its delicious flavour makes it a hit with adults too! A suisse makes a tasty treat at any time of day, particularly when washed down with a cup of tea or coffee.

The Pangée

This biscuit invented in June 2001 contains apricots, honey and almonds. This delicious sweetmeat is supposed to represent the earth's original supercontinent, Pangaea, which formed around 250 million years ago.

How's that for an original idea? Don't complain if you buy one and find some of it missing, though. It's meant to be like that, to represent the first fault that formed in Pangaea. And the apricot in the middle is meant to symbolise Drôme, at the centre of the world.

The locals are lovely people, but they do seem to think the whole world revolves around them!

Anne-Sophie PIC

Cooking has always been in the family in the Pic household, and today Anne-Sophie Pic has taken up the reins. For three generations, Maison Pic has been an institution close to the hearts of the people of Valence, creating its own unique gastronomic aura. It was Anne-Sophie's great-grandmother who was the first to put her culinary talents to good use!

Anne-Sophie's plaudits have included 2007 Chef of the Year followed by Best Female Chef in the World in 2011, and in 2013 she became the female chef with the most Michelin stars.

She follows in the footsteps of her father and grandfather, consistently combining a warm welcome, sophisticated and creative cuisine and perfect attention to detail in her presentation. She opened a smart bistro, Bistrot André, which serves up elegant cuisine in an old-style bistro setting.

She opened Le Bar Rose in 2021 — an exclusive experience blending the art of mixology with the enchanting, intimate setting of the Maison Pic gardens. A true ode to aromas and flavor profiles, featuring creative dishes made for sharing. Since 2023, she has also been offering indulgent afternoon treats ("4 o'clock delights") in her Michelin-starred restaurant, for those with a sweet tooth!

MASACHI IJICHI

Japanese chef Masachi Ijichi has been passionate about French cuisine since his early childhood. On arriving in France he perfected his skills working for Anne-Sophie Pic. He also worked in the kitchens of the Pourcell brothers in Montpellier and at Key Passion in Nice.

Returning to Valence, Masachi opened his own restaurant, La Cachette*, in 2005, and his high-quality blend of European and Oriental cuisine soon proved a great success. Masachi's cooking is a subtle combination of flavours complemented by friendly service and a warm welcome.

And if La Cachette* – which has held one Michelin star since 2009 – is a must-try dining experience in Valence it is also because of the totally fresh ambiance created by the clean lines of the uncluttered decor. In 2020, inside La Cachette restaurant, he opened le Bac à Traille, which boasts an innovative and frequently changed menu.

THE BERTRAND BROTHERS

In the Bertrand family, it is the sons who are in demand! Worthy successors to the gastronomic heritage of their father and grandfather before them, Jacques (in the kitchen) and Jean-Paul (front of house) represent the third generation of the hugely talented Bertrand family.

But the two brothers are not just starting out in the business – far from it! Before re-joining the bosom of the family, Jacques perfected his technique with the Gleize family (at the Bonne Etape in Château-Arnoux) and at Maison Pic (when Anne-Sophie's father Jacques was in charge there), while Jean-Paul learned his trade at the Oustau de Baumanière in Les Baux and Chez Maxim's in Paris. Their approach focuses on the 'gastronomic emotion' generated by this culinary duo who maintain the fine line between balance, precision and service.

BAPTISTE POINOT

Awarded one Michelin star and three toques by Gault & Millau, Baptiste Poinot opened his restaurant Flaveurs* in 2006, which became Epithèque* in 2025. Baptiste trained in the kitchens of Chabran (Michel Chabran's one-star restaurant in Pont-de-l'Isère).

Designed as an invitation, Epithèque* offers a unique multi-sensory experience — flavors, textures, and sensations that engage all the senses and speak to every generation.

The chef has also opened another venue in a more casual, bistro-style spirit: L'Épithèque, wine bar (open only for groups). In a relaxed yet refined setting, guests can enjoy his colorful, generous, and slightly nostalgic cuisine. A culinary experience built around "reimagined terroir" dishes, paired with a curated selection of exceptional regional wines. The wine bar was conceived as a lively, joyful space for everyone who, like Baptiste Poinot, loves to share life's simple, flavorful pleasures.

Other top dining destinations

Mandibule

Maxime Szczepaniak's restaurant in the village circulaire of Alixan was awarded one toque by the Gault&Millau guide in 2024. His gastronomic cuisine, described as 'accessible', is created using top-quality local produce, with everything except the coffee sourced within a 20km radius. The frequently changing menu, which promises a 'gustatory voyage', explores flavours unique to the region. After training with Thierry Marx and honing his art alongside top chefs including Masashi Ijichi and Nadia Sammut, this young chef makes no secret of his quest for excellence.

Sevag Agop learned his passion for cooking from his mother. He describes his cuisine as 'contemporary'. Taking traditional French gastronomy, Sevag adds a twist of influences from other countries picked up on his travels far and wide. From starter to desert, everything is made in-house using only local or French produce that is in season. Keen to please diners of all preferences, this modern chef has created a non-meat version of each of his dishes. Fleur de farine

Fleur de Farine is a biscuiterie that does more than bake biscuits. Every day, manager Pierre-Hugues prepares a different dish for dining in house or to take away. Savoury, sweet, vegetarian or not, there's something for everyone. Besides lasagna, ravioli, roast meats, tarts and gratins, he also offers fruit tartlets, cookies and chocolate biscuits, all made using local ingredients.

Sports and Nature

ENJOY THE FRESH AIR

Flanked by the Vercors, River Rhône and hills of Ardèche, Valence Romans is an endless outdoor playground. In the saddle, on foot, on the water and in the air, here you can get out and about and take a breath of fresh air. Family rambles, mountain biking, climbing, hiking, water skiing and more... Nature welcomes you with open arms for an outdoor adventure at your own pace under the sunny skies of Drôme.

Pottering and urban greenery

VALENCE

The canals

Canal du Thon, Canal de la Grande Marquise: these evocative names feature among the more than 17 km of open-air canals around the city. They are a haven for urban plant and animal life. The canals are a highly original part of Valence's ecological and historical heritage and a treasure that must be protected. Their origin lies in the rainwater that infiltrates down through Vercors Mountains and Valence Plain, ending its journey at impermeable layers of rock, from where it emerges to form wetlands and countless springs, which are fed into the network of canals. Today, some 20 kilometres of canals are underground.

Medieval records illustrate how important the construction of these canals has been to Valence since time immemorial. The water in them powers the wheels of a number of mills. Two of the largest, which once ground wheat but now press walnuts for their oil, can be found on the Canal des Moulins near the city's Saunière gate. In the 19th century, factories were built on other canals, particularly the Canal de la Fabrique, using the water to provide power for fulling mills, forges and silk manufactories. Water wheels were constructed along the Canal des Malcontents to power a variety of small industries, including a marble sawmill, a baryte factory and various munitions and metalworking businesses. Today, all the mills and industrial buildings have gone and the canals have become peaceful watery byways. The remains of the odd wash house can still be found here and there, particularly on the northern branch of the Malcontents, showing that in addition to the water's use in industry and farming it was an important domestic resource.

3 suggested walks

The canals of l'Épervière 5,8 km / 1h35

This greenway running through the Jouvét, Trinitaires, Marcel Paul and Épervière Parks takes you as far as the marina.

The canals of Châteauvert 6 km / 1h40

This walk explores the city's Châteauvert quarter, where you can see the springs fed by the underground water of the Vercors.

The canals of Le Charran 2,5 km / 30 min

This district has held on to the village feel it has had for centuries. The canals here irrigate a host of little private and communal gardens.

VALENCE

Parc Jouvét

A swathe of greenery just a stone's throw from the famous Kiosque Peynet bandstand, as one of the city's biggest urban parks this open space is central Valence's green lung. Every day, the locals pour through the monumental gates in their droves for a breath of fresh air and a bit of peace and quiet.

Officially designated a 'Jardin remarquable' in 2006, Parc Jouvét is home to 700 species of trees and flowers.

It's the perfect place for a picnic, where parents can relax and unwind while the children play happily. There's a little train, animal house, aviary of parrots and budgerigars, children's playground, trampolines and more... in short, plenty of places to let off steam. In the early 2010s, the warden's house, built in 1908, was converted into a venue for temporary exhibitions, adding yet another string to Parc Jouvét's bow.

This park really does offer something for everyone, regardless of age or interest. If you're coming to Valence, it is simply a must!

VALENCE

L'Épervière Park and Marina

France's leading river-based leisure facility, Epervière Marina offers wonderfully relaxing surroundings just a short hop from Valence city centre.

The long-distance cycle route ViaRhôna also takes you here. The marina has moorings for more than 420 boats, available for rental seasonally or all year round. Covering an area of 32,000 m², Epervière Marina offers extensive leisure facilities used daily by a host of sports clubs: sailing, canoeing, rowing, swimming and more... And that's not all: the Water Park boasts 700 m² of leisure pools open all year round. There's an aqua zone, well-being centre and not forgetting the water slides with flowing river and the high-adrenaline water drop.

Thanks to its strategic geographical position, Valence is easily accessible not only by road but also by river; a centrally located haven just a day's navigation from the Mediterranean Sea.

BOURG-DE-PÉAGE

Bois des Naix

The Bois des Naix, the second-largest urban park in the entire Rhône-Alpes region, is a beautiful 12-hectare green space right in the middle of the town of Bourg-de-Péage.

This park is the perfect place to spend time, and people come here to chill out, walk, run, relax and more... Children will enjoy the fun playgrounds, and besides jogging, sporty types can use the 17 workout stations along the fitness trail.

Nature and history lovers have not been forgotten either. It may have been planted and shaped by man, but the Bois des Naix is still a green space in its own right. Home to a diverse collection of flora and 140 species of animal, some regarded as 'remarkable', the Bois des Naix forms its own ecosystem harbouring a particularly rich biodiversity that deserves to be protected. For this reason, the council is determined to maintain it as naturally as possible. No chemicals or pesticides are permitted, the grass is left to grow long using eco-friendly methods to preserve the wild insect and flower population, and pests are caught using natural methods. Every effort is made to protect this ecological corridor running through the town.

BOURG-LÈS-VALENCE

L'île parc-Girodet

In 12 hectares of unspoilt surroundings a stone's throw from the town, this is the place to come and stroll along the Rhône riverside or enjoy your favourite sport such as cycling or running, in peace and quiet. And it's the perfect spot for a family picnic or barbecue, perhaps followed by a spontaneous game of boules while the kids are busy in the playground or skipping through the sprinklers to cool down.

With picnic areas, barbecues, boules terrains, a 5,000m² esplanade, a children's playground and a water jousting basin, there's enough to keep you occupied all day long!

In the summer, an outdoor bar serves drinks and local tapas, which you can enjoy while sitting among the greenery and watching the magnificent sunset

Exploring the countryside

VALENCE ROMANS AGGLO

The foothills of the Vercors

From pretty much anywhere in Valence Romans you get a stunning view of the foothills of the Vercors. The Vercors Mountains, which span the two départements of Drôme and Isère, form a beautiful natural backdrop, and both locals and visitors can't get enough of the view.

From everywhere in town you can see the impressive crags rising in the distance, the mountains visible from morning to night and changing colour as the weather comes and goes.

There are lots of footpaths on the mountainsides of La Raye and the Monts du Matin, with plenty of views along the way. But you can also explore them on a mountain bike, fly overhead in a paraglider, go rock climbing nearby, and more...

MONTÉLÉGER

Parc de Lorient

The 17-hectare Parc Départemental de Lorient near the village of Montéléger attracts some 200,000 visitors a year, who come here for recreation and relaxation in unspoilt surroundings. With woodland, grassy areas, a river, picnic spots and plenty of walking trails, it's the perfect place for any number of activities.

A Protected Nature Area, the Parc de Lorient is home to nature in all its unspoilt finery. Here, you'll find up to 151 species of flowers, 37 species of birds, butterflies, dragonflies and lots of mammals too (squirrels, rabbits, brown hares and also red foxes and European badgers all call this place home).

There are plenty of activities on offer here, with a choice of trails enabling visitors to explore at their own pace. Joggers come here to exercise, and there are tennis courts too, for those who want to work up a sweat. Here and there around the park, there are also a number of Anima Motrix art installations, inspired by different animal habitats.

MONTMIRAL

Forêt de Thivolet

The source of the River Savasse, the Forêt de Thivolet is one of the most beautiful wooded areas in the hilly Drôme des Collines.

The forest is made up mostly of sessile oaks, hornbeams and chestnut trees. The source of the river is two kilometres upstream of the lake and the ground here is waterlogged, providing the ideal habitat for black alder and ash trees, accompanied by a host of unusual plants that love the cool, damp, peaty soil. The whole area forms a natural habitat of great ecological interest.

BARCELONNE

Tour de Barcelonne

From the Tour de Barcelonne near Valence, the surviving tower of the old feudal castle that once stood here, there are uninterrupted views of the Valence Plain.

Little is known about the origins of this medieval defensive tower perched among the foothills of the Vercors. It is thought to be the remains of a castle built here in the 12th century and dismantled in the 17th century under Louis XIII. This tower was probably originally the castle keep. Restored by the owner between 1970 and 1985, today it stands 15 metres high and is accessible from both Barcelonne and Combovin.

If you're coming from Combovin, it's also worth taking in the Chapelle Saint Marguerite that overlooks the village. It's quite a hard climb up, but from the top you get a fabulous view of the edge of the Ardèche mountains. This short, quick walk is a great way to get some fresh air!

LA BAUME-CORNILLANE

Pangée, Centre of the earth

Follow the discovery trail to explore this area with an important history to an incredible view of the Valence Plain and the ruins of the castle, of which little more than the keep remains today. On the different stages of the walk, you learn about the geological uplift that formed the Alps, the flora and fauna and the rock marking the centre of Pangaea. This rock takes you back around 240 million years to a time when the world was made up of a single supercontinent. Today it symbolises the centre of the world as it was originally formed.

This circular ramble passes through the hamlet of St-Martin-d'Hostun, where the 11th-century church was first added to the national Historical Monuments register in 1978. Along the way you'll come across a stone quarry, a château, a walnut press, walnut groves, the Isère Valley, and more...

6km circuit with a total ascent of 230m. - 2h30

LA BAUME-CORNILLANE

L'envolée des corneilles

Leaving from the village, let us guide by Lina, Mia and Corneilla, the three crows symbols of the village. Discover through the orientation, the history and the biodiversity all the beauty of this town.

*3 routes between 2 and 5 kms
Parking under the townhall.*

ROCHEFORT-SAMSON

Le pas du loup

One of the particularities of this sector is a serie of four well marked pertuis or "goulets" between Beauregard Baret, Rochefort-Samson, Barbieres and St Vincent la Commanderie.

The torrents of the Monts du Matin, then more vigorous, built large cones of dejection or "portals" dug into the mountain. These wide, clear notches at the foot of the mountain contrast with the green landscapes of the heights.

The Oyans valley, which opens onto a landscape of valleys and hills, is one of the most beautiful gullies of the Monts du Matin. The narrow gorge was dominated in the Middle Ages by the castle of Rochefort which controlled the access.

Tour of 8,6 km - 3 h 30

Cycling routes

ViaRhôna

As in many other regions of France, these days cycling is one of the most popular leisure pursuits in the Valence region. Lots of cyclists pedal the ViaRhôna greenway on a daily basis, particularly from springtime onwards with the return of the warm sunshine. As its name suggests, the ViaRhôna runs alongside the River Rhône. And it is not just open to cyclists; you'll find people walking and rollerblading along it, and you may even see the odd unicycle!

The ViaRhôna greenway will eventually run for 815 km, from Lake Geneva all the way to the Mediterranean. Running through the regions of Auvergne Rhône- Alpes, Provence-Alpes-Côte d'Azur and Languedoc-Roussillon Midi-Pyrénées, it leads cyclists and travellers on a discovery of the towns, villages, local dishes and typical countryside of the South of France. It even takes you right into Valence city centre, from where Epervière Marina is just a short ride away.

In 2024 a new ViaRhôna route was completed. This starts to the north, where the Bourg-lès-Valence cycle bridge connects Girodet Island with the old town. The route then continues on dedicated cycle lanes through Valence's lower town to Epervière Marina via Parc Jouvet and the Rhône riverside. The idea is to make cycling through the town a more attractive proposition, giving cyclists the opportunity to visit the city centre.

Belle Via

And it's not just the Valence area that has a car-free route. The Romans region does too, with the La Belle Via. The path runs alongside the River Isère and is open for cycling, rollerblading and walking. It's a great place to unwind and see the countryside, offering lovely views of the Vercors and Monts du Matin mountains and accessible to all non-motorised forms of transport. Along the way there are footbridges across the river to enable you to get from one side to another, particularly between Bourg-de-Péage and Romans-sur-Isère. And heading away from the Rhône riverside, you can easily reach the foot of the Vercors at Saint-Nazaire-en-Royans.

Facilities to make getting around easier

Valence has set up "vélobox" to allow the cycling visitors to put their bike and luggage in boxes for free and have the possibility to visit the old town. The keys for the véloboxes can be picked up at the Tourist Office during opening hours.

GÉNISSIEUX

Trot Trot Trot

Trot Trot Trot offers unique all-terrain electric trotting tours on various routes in the Drôme des Collines (departure from Génissieux, 5 min from Romans sur Isère/20 min from Valence) in the vineyards of Tain l'Hermitage or in the heart of the Drôme, in Chabeuil.

Leisure or more technical, family outing, with friends, or professional, there are different tours adapted to your level, so that everyone can have fun and discover (or recover everything else) corners of beautiful nature.

You ride a scooter (standing up) a bit like a mountain bike (big wheels, suspension, disc brakes, etc.) but the comparison stops there! Your scooter gives you a comfortable and environmentally friendly all-terrain ride. And it's electric, so you glide silently by. And above all it's easy to use, making it accessible to everyone, providing a smooth, fun and safe ride (speed limited to maximum 25 km/h) with no effort required.

Trot Trot Trot also organises 'apéro'trot' trips, combining sightseeing with local produce tasting!

PEYRINS

Acrobois

On 5 ha, l'Acrobois proposes 15 routes with all levels of difficulties, which make it the biggest of the Drôme.

The park is adapted either for adults and children. The first level (the easier) is ok for children aged two years old. Le 15th level (the more difficult) even firemen and militaries don't finish it. All courses are in a continuous life line: you can never get off. The Saferoller does not require manipulations, it is one of the most efficient at the moment.

It even offers an external laser game on a field of almost 1 hectare, from 3 to 20 players.

Obligatory support under 5 years.

ÉTOILE-SUR-RHÔNE

Étoile Park 26, outdoors centre

Etoile Park 26 at Etoile-sur-Rhône, 15 minutes from Valence, is a lake set in unspoilt countryside where you can enjoy a host of fun activities.

It's a lovely relaxing spot with something for everyone: inflatable play structures, kitesurfing, a donut ride, paddleboarding, pedalos and more... Kitesurfers can receive tips through an earpiece from an instructor to improve their technique.

In addition to water sports, there are also boules terrains and beach areas for volleyball and other ball sports. There's a food outlet too, selling crêpes, sandwiches, French fries and more.

The facilities are rustic, simple, laid back and relaxed. In summer, there are even music evenings. The many different activities on offer at Etoile Park will delight everyone in the group!

BEAUMONT-LÈS-VALENCE

La Truite du Père Eugène

La Truite du Père Eugène is a fishing lake and activities centre a few kilometres outside Valence where you can have a great time with your family or friends.

It's a relaxed, family-friendly place that offers something for everyone. It is open all year round, but spring and summer are the best times to come here. La Truite du Père Eugène specialises in trout farming, and you can come here to fish. The equipment – fishing rod, bait and a bucket – is provided free of charge, enabling everyone to try their hand at fishing for trout. Or if you'd rather simply take a fish home with you, freshly caught trout are on sale too.

And there are plenty of other things to do here besides. On a hot summer's day, there's nothing better than chilling out on the beach and swimming in the other part of the lake. There are plenty of shady spots under the trees for a picnic, or if you prefer a cooked meal there is a very good restaurant.

There is also a mini-golf on site – great fun for all the family!

UPIE

Upie Zoo

The original Jardin aux Oiseaux was opened in 1976 by Bernard Liauzu, a passionate bird watcher and nature lover.

Over the years, as the garden was progressively stocked with other animals, Le Jardin aux Oiseaux became Upie Zoo. Now you can see wallabies, turtles, lesser flamingos, great green macaws and more... Home to more than 215 animal species in grounds of six hectares, Upie Zoo is now an endangered species breeding and conservation centre.

This fun and educational attraction includes a birds of prey demonstration, parrot experience, mini-farm, bird feeding, tropical glasshouse and more, all in totally natural surroundings!

In 2020, a number of new species arrived at the Zoo, including meerkats, ringtailed lemurs, porcupines and radiated tortoises.

Heritage, art and crafts

DISCOVER OUR LOCAL GEMS

In Valence Romans, history is present in every cobbled street, every picture-postcard village and every monument.

Officially recognised as a 'Pays d'Art et d'Histoire', the region boasts Roman remains, remarkable architecture and a thriving arts and crafts scene.

In Romans, our living artisan, artist and local manufacturing traditions have kept our heritage alive and given it new life in a town where the shoemaking industry once enjoyed a golden age.

Valence's architectural heritage

VALENCE

Kiosque Peynet

Of all Valence's monuments, the Kiosque Peynet is the most famous. This bandstand, built in 1862 on Place du Champ de Mars, was designed by the famous 19th-century architect Eugène Poitoux, who also created the city's Monumental Fountain. The romantic story connected with the Kiosque Peynet came about one summer's evening in 1942 when the illustrator Raymond Peynet, staying in Valence at the time, drew a cartoon of the romantic scene he saw there. A young long-haired violinist was playing alone in the bandstand, under the admiring gaze of a single young girl. His illustration Les amoureux de Peynet became famous all over the world. The bandstand has been associated with love ever since, and is still today a meeting place, not just for lovers but for friends and families too. Interesting fact: the Kiosque Peynet was designated a Historical Monument in 1982.

VALENCE

Maison des Têtes

This building in the heart of Valence old town owes its name to the many carved heads decorating its façade. This unusual and original embellishment suggests that this was the home of a wealthy person, and the house did indeed belong to a rich 16th-century Valence consul who also taught at the university.

The house also has a stunning and finely decorated internal courtyard, including two complete statues. But what do the carved heads represent? The statues on the first floor are depictions of Fortune and Time, while the carvings above them represent the four winds (north, south, east and west), which make their presence felt in Valence at certain times of year.

A new cultural centre opened on the ground floor in June 2023. It is home to a permanent exhibition about the Valence plain – which stretches from the Rhône to the foothills of the Vercors Plateau – that explains the history, geology and architecture of the area, along with a museum recounting the town's military connections and a space for temporary exhibitions. The Pays d'Art et d'Histoire also organises a series of guided tours and workshops for children.

VALENCE

Cathedral of Saint-Apollinaire

The cathedral, one of Valence's oldest monuments, was consecrated on 5 August 1095 by the pope while on his way to preach the First Crusade. Since then the cathedral has undergone many transformations, particularly during its reconstruction in the early 17th century following the Wars of Religion. A staging post on the pilgrimage route, it has an ambulatory to accommodate travellers.

Inside there is a bust of Pope Pius VI containing his entrails. This statue commemorates one of the defining moments in the cathedral's history, when the pope was taken prisoner during his flight from Rome, which had been taken over by the Directory.

VALENCE Le Pendentif

Le Pendentif, one of the first buildings in France to be declared a Historical Monument (in 1840), remains one of Valence's most mysterious buildings. It takes its name from its unusual architecture, a cupola supported by a kind of vaulting called pendentives.

Built in 1548 in the cloister of the Cathedral of St Apollinaris, Le Pendentif consists of a material found mainly in Drôme: a soft sedimentary rock called molasse. Today it is a listed monument, but it is thought to have been used for all sorts of weird and wonderful purposes in the past, such as a bar, a cellar, and even a cesspit at one time!

VALENCE The Saint Jean district

To many visitors, Valence is like a jumble of mini-districts, each with their own unique atmosphere and surroundings. The Saint Jean district is home to the city's most vibrant artistic and foodie communities.

Place Saint Jean is a quaint square with a lovely atmosphere. The church here has a neo-Romanesque bell tower that dominates the city. And it is here you'll find the market hall, where weekly produce markets and occasional arts and crafts markets are held. With its distinctly artsy feel, the Saint Jean district also boasts many of the city's best restaurants, with lots of dining choices on offer all year round.

VALENCE Maison Mauresque

This house represents a break with the city's traditional architecture. Located right in the city centre, it forms a striking contrast with the old buildings around it. Its unusual design is meant to evoke the wonders of the Orient.

In 1858, the city decided to widen Rue de la Préfecture to 14 metres and align all the façades along the street. One plot of land on the street was sold to a Monsieur Ferlin, who then had to build an asymmetrical house on it, with one 2m façade to the east and one 4m façade facing west! A frequenter of the city's artistic community, Monsieur Ferlin drew inspiration from Oriental design for his façades, earning the building the nickname 'La Mauresque à Ferlin'. The building's façade was completely refurbished in April 2019.

Valence's cultural heritage

VALENCE

The museum of Valence, Art and Archaeology

Officially opened in 1850, this museum was moved to the former bishop's palace, very close to the Cathedral of St Apollinaris, in 1911. Since then it has had a varied and interesting history, the latest episode being its complete renovation. After seven years of refurbishment work, the Musée de Valence reopened to reveal a museum of a completely different kind.

In December 2013, the 'new-generation' museum was opened to the public for the first time. Completely restructured both in terms of design and layout, the museum leads visitors through a comprehensive tour of its Art and Archaeology collections. The permanent exhibition boasts some 20,000 works from prehistory to the present day, featuring gems such as local artist and collector Pierre Boncompain and the seminal Rococo painter Fragonard.

But the high point (literally!) of a visit to this museum is the amazing views from the rooftop belvedere. Imagine... A 360° panorama of the Rhône Valley and Vercors Mountains, sprinkled with the orange-coloured rooftops of Valence glinting in the sun, along with a gorgeous vista of the River Rhône making its stately and majestic way through the heart of the city. A staggering view you simply mustn't miss. Every year, alongside its permanent collection, the Musée de Valence presents one or two temporary collections featuring unique artworks, local artists and Interesting fact: the building is also home to a reference library containing more than 10,000 works on Art and Archaeology.

The Armenian Heritage Centre CPA

The CPA is unique in Rhône-Alpes as the only place in the region dedicated to the history of the region's Armenian population and the story of their exodus to the area. Through personal and collective accounts and from a general historical perspective, the Centre explains an important episode in our history, when thousands of Armenians fled their homeland for Valence during the Armenian genocide. Using a variety of audiovisual resources, the CPA presents an eye-opening and informative look at these events, raising issues relevant to the society in which we live today, such as immigration, statelessness and education.

Animation's cinema

If the animation's cinema is one of the strong points of the cultural effervescence, the 7th art, in a general way, the cinema has an important place. Most of the structures like the "Lux", national scene, and the "navire" independent cinema, value this art in all its forms: from the most traditional film broadcast to shows combining images and sounds on an open stage.

The valorisation of this cinematographic patrimony takes all its sense during the numerous events dedicated to the cinema, organised on the territory: the "Festival d'un jour" (dedicated to the animation cinema, short and feature length films), the "International Festival of Valence writers and composers", the "Spanish and Latin American cinema", "Viva cinema" (restored films, ciné-concerts...) and Festivita (Italian cinema).

The second pole of excellence in the Rhône-Alpes region, the Cartoucherie de Bourg les Valence is one of the strengths of the Valencine region: its know-how in the animated image sector.

It is indeed in the heart of this territory that the folimage studios, now famous for their feature films: "Tante Hilda", "Mia and the Migou" and more recently "Gus, the little bird" and "Phantom Boy". We also find Fargo, l'Équipée, la Poudrière...

Romans' architectural heritage

ROMANS-SUR-ISÈRE The Collegiate Church of Saint Barnard

The moment you enter the old town you are greeted by the striking form of St Barnard's Collegiate Church. But this historical landmark is a not just popular with visitors interested in religious heritage.

The church, built in 837 by St Barnard (when he was bishop of Vienne), stands on the bank of the River Isère. A blend of Romanesque and Gothic architecture, it is home to one of France's greatest Romanesque treasures: nine embroidered wall hangings depicting the Passion of Christ. And the church contains other gems too, including 18th-century walnut panelling, hidden 13th-century murals, the slipper of Pope Pius VI and stained-glass windows by the German artist Georg Ettl.

ROMANS-SUR-ISÈRE The tour Jacquemart

As in many French towns in the Middle Ages, in the 14th century a public clock was built in Romans-sur-Isère by popular demand. The mechanism, clock face and bell were installed at the top of the castle tower, which is today known as the Tour Jacquemart.

Every hour, the bell was struck by a wooden mechanical figure carrying an iron hammer, originally known as Jacques Bonhomme. The figure, which never failed to appear and complete his task, later became known as Jacques Marteau, after the hammer he carried, as was the custom at that time. Over the years his name has evolved to become Jacquemart. The famous Jacquemart rang the bell in the streets of Romans for the first time on 2 March 1429.

The tower was fully renovated in November 2020, and the forecourt development was completed in April 2023.

ROMANS-SUR-ISÈRE Merchant's mansions

These opulent town houses in Romans are just as beautiful inside as they are on the outside. While you're exploring the back streets and some of the larger squares, look up and you'll see some very grand façades!

In the late Middle Ages, Romans cloth was exported as far away as the Middle East. The wealthy cloth manufacturers and merchants of the day built these splendid Flamboyant Gothic and Renaissance town houses. There are a dozen fine examples of these mansions in Romans with evocative names like Nugues, Duport-Roux (de Coursac), Clérieu, Thomé, Chabert, le Clarisse and de Loulle. The best way to see them is on a guided tour with an official Pays d'Art et d'Histoire heritage guide.

You will get to see the internal courtyards, which are not always open to the public.

Romans' shoemaking industry

The history of shoemaking here began when medieval tanners and tawers realised that the town was in the perfect location, with the clean, clear water of the Isère and the canals close to the Presle quarter providing all the resources needed for tanning leather. A shoemaking industry grew up where there was an abundant source of leather.

The industry's glory days were between the two World Wars, and it reached its height between 1945 and 1970. Various related industries such as shoebox production, shoe polishes, glues and insoles also emerged. By the end of the Second World War, more than 5,000 people in Romans were working in all the different sectors of the shoemaking industry.

But in the 1970s, the industry collapsed. The relocation of manufacturing, the globalisation of trade and competition from countries with lower labour costs all took their toll and many businesses closed, leading to widespread job losses. At one time, every family in Romans was connected with the leatherworking trades in some way.

And today?

Following these dark days, the Archer group revived the industry in Romans and the shoemaking workshops started up again. The town is now a centre of small-scale, high-quality artisan shoemaking. With footwear now more of a universal product and less of a luxury, the brands have turned to creativity and innovation to win niche markets.

The birthplace of the luxury footwear and leatherworking industries, Romans continues to thrive today on its creative industries.

Footwear Museum

If there is one place that best sums up what Romans is all about, then it has to be the International Footwear Museum. On display in the stone-walled museum foyer is an enormous pair of wooden shoes, which sets the scene perfectly: welcome to the fascinating world of footwear. With 16,500 permanent exhibits on display (as well as regular temporary exhibitions), the museum recounts the history of footwear through the ages in this town famous for its boot and shoe manufacturing heritage. Inside you will come across some very unusual ways of shoeing feet, from the first shoes worn by our ancestors (you'll wonder how on earth they walked in them!) to boots and shoes from the four corners of the world. It's a museum that makes you think again about those all-too-familiar objects we wear on our feet every day. The museum's immediate surroundings, the former Convent of the Visitation, give it a unique atmosphere. It is also flanked by formal French-style gardens that are a wonderful place to stroll and relax and are the venue for some of Romans' highest-profile events.

In 2020, following several months of building work, the Footwear Museum reopened with a revamped exhibition layout and new collections on show. The new exhibits – including some recent acquisitions – have never before been displayed, and the museum has been updated to include more contemporary and in some cases iconic shoes that everyone can identify with.

These include the famous sneaker, notably a pair of legendary Stan Smiths, a global superstar! You will also find the highly prized and very chic court shoes so popular with not only Charles Jourdain clients in the 1960s but also Louboutin fans in the 1990s. Accompanying the exhibits are numerous illustrations, photographs and audio and video recordings that create a more fun ambience, backed up by a host of fascinating inside stories along the way.

You will learn how Dr Martens came to be, what lies behind the design of the wedge espadrille, who the white Repetto dance shoes – so loved by Serge Gainsbourg – were originally created for, who had the idea of making a women's version of the derby, and why Louboutins have red soles.

The giant shoes

Romans

Inspired by models on display in the shoe museum, these twelve 2m-high monumental shoes are presented along a trail in the heart of Romans town centre. These iconic and remarkable models were created by local manufacturers and famous bootmakers. Local specialist sculptors were commissioned to create the shoes.

Court shoe with very high heels

Charles Jourdan • 1963

Symbolic court shoe of the Charles Jourdan company, its pointed toe and Louis XV stiletto heel testify to the elegance of the company installed at Romans until 2007. Its position as a leader has been confirmed by the collaboration with Christian Dior.

Shoe without heel

André Pérugia • 1937

The shoe without heel questions. This model defies the laws of gravity and balance. It is the work of André Pérugia, recognized as one of the greatest bootmakers of the 20th century. The latter collaborates with the biggest fashion houses like Christian Dior or Balmain.

Chaussure masque

André Pérugia • 1949

A great Parisian bootmaker, André Pérugia is an innovator. He also knows how to draw his ideas from bygone times or other places. Venice and its masks are a recurring theme. A nod to local history and the Carnival of Romans where the event has been celebrated for several decades

Mule pince

Robert Clergerie • 1998

This graphic and elegant mule marks a unique style in the image of its creator. His search for sobriety, simplicity characterizes his creations. In a relentless search for creativity and innovation, he has imagined a metal heel that gives the model a rough and airy look.

Derby tressé

Stéphane Kélian • 1990

The specificity of the Stéphane KELIAN house resided in this unique and exclusive way of treating braided. This mastery of exceptional know-how has remained unmatched. Created in 1960, the company, based in Romans, grew thanks to the talents of the three Keloglanian brothers.

Chaussure pensée

Christian Louboutin • 1992

Christian Louboutin designed this shoe in 1992, drawing inspiration from the graphics and colours of Andy Warhol's pop art.

Fish shoe

André Pérugia • 1955

The shoe "Poisson" is inspired by the painting "Les poissons noirs" painted by Georges BRAQUE in 1942. Its creator, André Pérugia, feeds on artists of his time as well as from the Orient or the decorative arts.

Shock-heel shoe

Bruno Frisoni • 2004

This court shoe is a tribute to the great Parisian bootmaker Roger VIVIER, inventor of the stiletto in the year 1952. A true artist imbued with avant-garde trends, he gives his shoes the volumes of a sculpture. He invents new forms of heel, like here the "shock" heel.

Escarpin étoilé

Andrea Pfister • 1994

This court shoe is a tribute to the great Parisian bootmaker Roger VIVIER, inventor of the stiletto in the year 1952. A true artist imbued with avant-garde trends, he gives his shoes the volumes of a sculpture. He invents new forms of heel, like here the "shock" heel.

Escarpin girafe

Stéphane Couvé-Bonnaire • 1995

This amazing court shoe is intriguing. Its creator, then a young student, participated in the competition "Exercise of style" organized by the French Shoe Federation. He imagines and creates this heel that evokes the hind legs of a giraffe. He makes a sensation and wins first prize.

Derby Roel

Robert Clergerie • 2016

This derby is a flagship model of the brand. In 1981, Clergerie put at women's feet a model so far resolutely masculine, the derby. Published every season since its creation, it has largely contributed to the reputation of the Maison Clergerie, a lack of prestige in the world.

Gentleman's boot

Joseph Fenestrier • 1923

This 1920s gentleman's boot, made in Romans, was designed to go with an everyday suit. It was designed by J. Fenestrier, a footwear industry pioneer.

This walk explores Romans-sur-Isère and the surrounding countryside, starting with the town's historical back streets on a discovery tour of the local heritage through the traditional crafts that are still practised here.

In all, around 20 artisans have opened up their workshops to the public to showcase their passion and expertise in painting, leatherwork, shoemaking, ceramics, fanmaking, bookbinding, plastic arts, musical instrument making and more...

The trail then ends with a gentle stroll along the Isère riverside.

Exploring our villages

CHABEUIL

Medieval village

Chabeuil is one of the numerous villages of Valence surroundings which is built around a molasse hill : the Gontarde hill. It seems that the city was founded at the top and around this same hill in the middle of the Middle Ages. This is directly related to an ever older favorable location of the site as a major axis of communication in the region.

This privileged location will make Chabeuil a prosperous city thanks to the trade of cloth and paper until the 19th century. Today's city has preserved important monuments in connection with this property. the monumental gate was saved thanks to a citizens' petition. Built in molasse, its hardware and grooves under the vault prove the existence of a harrow (reconstruction visible today) and a wooden door. A crest with the arms of the Princes of Monaco is hammered on the tympanum of the vault. The centrepiece of an ensemble of which only the porch remains, it is built on a Gallo Roman seat. The overhang of the top is more recent. This door was provided externally with a four-sided roof. A guard room is on the first floor.

The town hall, in neo-Gothic style, was built in 1877 in tuff stone (extracted in Peyrus, a nearby village). Its campanile is inspired by the Palazzo Vecchio of Florence and was built in 1903. On the left, a round tower adjoining the hotel, remnant of the medieval enclosure, is one of the few remaining elements of the old ramparts.

The church of Saint John the Baptist, built in stones of the Saône in place of the church of Saint Andéol demolished by the wars of religion. In the shape of a Greek cross, its 4 branches are of flat length and the altar is in the center. Inside, a painting offered by Napoleon III depicts the Virgin. Her face is that of the Empress Eugénie (his wife).

ÉTOILE-SUR-RHÔNE

Medieval village

Spread over alluvial terraces, the village of Etoile sur Rhône, from the Latin "stella" meaning star but here has the derived meaning of "crossroads".

Indeed, the place is a natural crossroads to the north, south and east. It is also an ideal monitoring post for the Rhone Valley, and has always been. The ancient history of Etoile is rich and the town has preserved the testimonies of the Roman era, the Middle Ages and the Renaissance but also of the Revolution.

To discover: the parish church Notre Dame d'Etoile, typical building of late Romanesque art. In the heart of the village, the church underwent two phases of construction: in the 12th century for the nave, then at the end of the 12th/ beginning of the 13th century for the choir and certainly for the many marquee decorations.

The monumental gate of the Château des Poitiers, also known as the Porte de Diane de Poitiers, served as the entrance to the castle. It dates from the thirteenth century with remodeling (at the level of the openings) during the fifteenth-sixteenth century, with a typical defensive work, on a square plan, pierced by a semicircular passage.

On the garden side, it remains the large barrel-vaulted staircase of the entrance door of the former dwelling that connected the upper and lower part (Diane's door)

ALIXAN

Circular village

Alixan is a circular medieval village with some remains of the old ramparts. Around a central molasse piton is a village with a triple ring.

In the middle of the top of the mound is a tower, the only remains of the old castle, which today adjoins the Mairie. A flight of monumental steps leads down to the grand esplanade below.

In the middle of the village, the Saint Didier church (Xth – XIIIth century) was built on different construction periods and the oldest, the Virgin Chapel was extended by an additional span. It houses an altar, paintings, and a statue of Ste Marthe defeating the Tarasque. (1829) stained glass windows date from the second half of the 19th century. The current belfry was rebuilt in 1776.

EYMEUX

Chapelle Sainte-Béatrix

Possibly erected on the site of a former priory founded by Blessed Beatrix of Ornacieux in the 14th century, the chapel Sainte Béatrix is of Romanesque Revival style and was completed in 1897.

It occupies a viewpoint overlooking the Isère and the former Port of Ouvej, on the side of the Ecançière (hamlet of Eymeux). Located in the Bessieux district, it hides in the trees at Mont Saint Martin. From the promontory overlooking the Isère, the panorama unfolds until novels. Its history and construction are closely linked to the cult of Saint Béatrix D'Ornacieux, a young Chartreuse from the Parmenian monastery who came to Eymeux in 1300 to found a new monastery with two friends.

In 1303, the nuns died and the locals began to worship in Beatrix. She was beatified in 1869.

In 1897, the construction of the chapel is completed, it is in Neo-Romanesque style.

It is celebrated every 1st Sunday of September on the occasion of a pilgrimage. Internal access is reserved for worship.

CHÂTEAUNEUF-SUR-ISÈRE

Troglodyte village

A dozen troglodyte houses remain in the state, this hamlet is the flagship. In the past, they were more numerous, which could explain the small old town and the name "Châteauneuf the village with 100 troglodytes". Châteauneuf is a stoned land whose name is "the molasse", tender stone present in all the low Dauphiné, where it is often used as a construction stone. If other molasse quarries exist in the surroundings, only a new castle site allowed its exploitation on a large scale.

Since antiquity, these carriers have supplied the materials to major medieval sites such as the Cathedral of Valencia, the collegiate church of Saint Barnard de Romans. Still used for the construction of the Bourne Canal in 1877, the molasse experienced an irreversible decline from that time on, notably due to the competition of cement.

Valence en Gastronomie Festival

Valence Romans is known for its gastronomy and delicious local produce, and this event gives you a great taste of what the region has to offer! Taking place over five days in September, this culinary festival consists of some 20 events featuring local chefs, producers, food companies and 53,000 foodies!

Each year, the Gastronomic Rally kicks off proceedings. This is a fun car rally on the roads of Drôme and Ardèche in which participants have to solve the clues to complete five mystery stages, visiting producers, winegrowers, farmers and restaurateurs along the way, with lots of opportunities for tasting the local produce. Who knows? Maybe you'll be the winner! This is followed two weeks later by four days of discoveries, encounters and tasty treats in the centre of Valence. The highlights include:

- Speed Tasting, an evening event where you learn how to pair dishes with wines with the help of sommeliers training at some of France's top gastronomic restaurants.
- The Festival Pagodas and 'Goûtatou' Tasting Stalls – come along and taste, taste, taste!

Chefs, pastry chefs, wine producers, ice cream makers and more, encouraging you to taste their delicious treats made with local produce. Quality food for a great price – that's what the Goûtatou offer!

- The Twin Towns Gastronomic Market, taking you on a delicious journey around the world.
- Le Cocktail des Chefs Étoilés: a gourmet battle between three Michelin-starred chefs, tasked with selecting the right ingredients to create the winning dish, awarded by the judges.
- The Children's Food Market – what a great idea! The children select the fruit and vegetables they want from the stalls, pay with the money they've been given and take away their own basket of market goodies.
- The Chefs' Lab, a real challenge! A line-up of chefs and pastry chefs have just 30 minutes to prepare their signature dishes! Followed by a tasting of the results.

Every year, the Valence en Gastronomie Festival ends on a high with a concert or show featuring a French celebrity

Festival sur le champ

The Festival sur le Champ, which takes place on the Champ de Mars in July, is one of Valence's biggest summer attractions. It's open to everyone, and what's more it's FREE!

A vast stage is erected right in front of the Kiosque Peynet, one of city's best-loved attractions, and the entire city centre buzzes over 4 or 5 nights of concerts featuring an eclectic mix of different musical styles.

Each night features a different kind of music: French pop, urban music, world music, and more... There's something for every taste and every age!

Kicking off the bill, the festival showcases local talent such as Vianney, Rover, Orelsan and Faudel. Other big-name artists to have played the Festival sur le Champ include Julien Doré, Grand Corps Malade, Juliette Armanet, Emilie Loiseau and Olivia Ruiz.

It's a great opportunity to join the throng to celebrate live music, eat and drink and take in the amazing views of the Château de Crussol and the Kiosque Peynet, right in the heart of Valence. And it's a fantastic place from which to admire the sunset.

A recent addition is the fringe festival, which lasts for the whole of July and features little-known local groups and singers performing in different places around the city, in the street, in front of bars and in public places. It's a great place to hang out, listen to some new sounds and discover new bands.

The festival is accessible to wheelchair users and there are plenty of food outlets around, too. No advance booking available.

Since it began in 2001, the annual Rencontres de la Photo Chabeuil has gone from strength to strength. It features well-known and lesser-known photographers from various backgrounds, each with their own style. There is no set theme, and the different exhibition venues show off Chabeuil's fine architecture both inside and outside the town walls.

And the exhibitions and evening talks have one thing in common: they are all free!

Winter magic & the Christmas Village

Valence's Christmas Village is the biggest Christmas market in the Drôme département! Every year, Valence starts gearing up for Christmas at the start of December. That's when the magic begins, with Christmas lights and decorations in the old town, the shops adorned with Christmas trees and garlands, special events in town and the vast Christmas market, full of the enticing smells of mulled wine and crêpes... Since 2015, Valence Christmas Market and Big Wheel have brought the Christmas spirit to the city, attracting thousands of visitors over the Christmas period. Come along to join the fun among the dozens of brightly illuminated wooden chalets selling hand-made goods and produce such as preserves, cheese, beers and foie gras. You can also enjoy a hot crêpe filled with chocolate or caramel, or perhaps a delicious waffle or churros. Or simply follow your nose around the chalets, full of great ideas for Christmas presents: hand-made jewellery, scarves, hats, natural and organic cosmetics, toys, and more... Throughout December, there are lots of events on at the Christmas Village, starting with the

This is a grand parade of 400 local adults and children in costume through streets of the city centre, followed by a fabulous firework display on the city's vast Champ de Mars square. It's a stunning spectacle! You can then take the time to browse the Christmas Market and explore the streets of the old centre, lit up by magical Christmas lights right through to the end of December.

Throughout the Christmas Village period there is a programme of free events on offer for all the family, including an 8km night-time Christmas trail run around Valence city centre that attracts nearly 1,000 runners every year. Santa will be there too, waiting in his grotto for the little ones to visit him for a photo. There are also free children's face-painting workshops, wooden toys and art and craft workshops. And that's not all – see the city on a horse-drawn ride or from 30 metres up by taking a spin on the Big Wheel. Tickets are available from the Tourist Office. Valence Christmas Market is a highlight of the winter here, a wonderful moment to enjoy with all the family.

This year, you can visit Valence's Christmas Village from 28 November to 28 December.

ÉTOILE-SUR-RHÔNE

L'Étoile du Bien-être

The Etoile du Bien-Être is without doubt the best of the region's low-key events. Bien-être is French for well-being, which is what this event is all about: a mix of talks, workshops and stands over two days celebrating well-being in all its forms. Alternative medicines, healthy foods, beauty products and even therapeutic arts are all here. The show features a host of exhibitors, who take an active part by offering a variety of workshops presenting the products and services they offer.

ROMANS

Romans Carnival

The region's most successful mass-appeal event, Romans Carnival is above all about creating a sense of community that everyone can share. It really sums up what Romans is all about, a rite of passage for everyone who grows up in the town.

Every year the people and associations of Romans come together to bring to life the costumes, parades and characters that mark the arrival of spring. The Carnival includes floral floats with children throwing confetti into the crowd, others throwing streamers, and performers on stilts who tend to either fascinate or frighten the children! Everywhere, there are people thronging in Carnival costumes, face paint, headdresses and more. It's such a fantastic experience to see all the children open-mouthed with wonder at the incredible costumes, and some even in tears when it all becomes too much! The crowd divides into two: those who stay in one place to watch the whole Carnival parade pass by, and those who follow the paraders, dancing and clapping their hands. Anyone can buy streamer bombs and confetti from wandering sellers and join in the fun. There is also a food stall area selling crêpes, churros, candyfloss and other tasty treats.

At the end of the afternoon, the Carmentran Carnival figure is put on trial, found guilty and set alight, usually on Place Jean Jaurès. Tradition has it that this punishment destroys all the ills that have beset the town's population. In 2019, Romans Carnival harked back to far-off Egypt in the days of the Pharaohs, with stilt walkers in Egyptian costume.

The Bloody Carnival

But back in Romans' history, in 1580, the event turned into a blood bath. During the Carnival that year, the townspeople's anger resulted in extensive rioting, and several people were killed. As a result of that episode so long ago, believe it or not, the Carnival was banned until 1970! Fortunately, today the Carnival has regained its place in Romans as a fun and sociable event.
